SAVORING THE SIGHTS

Rita Braver looks at a growing number of American tourists who are traveling to the Italian countryside for new sights, sounds and stimulation. But it's not the churches, Roman ruins or renaissance art these tourists are seeking out -- it's the food! They are called culinary vacations -- vacations where tourists opt to don an apron and head straight into a kitchen to learn the secrets of Italian cooking and peer into what many call the heart of Italian life.
