

Top 3 Vacation Cooking Classes in Italy

Love to Travel? Love Food & Cooking? Why Not Do Both?

Monica Lehua, Yahoo! Contributor Network

Jan 27, 2011 "Share your voice on Yahoo! websites. Start Here."

MORE:

Italy

Cooking School

Cooking Classes

Cooking Class

Flag

Post a comment

There's nothing like traveling and enjoying great food. Why not take a vacation to the home of great cooking, cultural events, fine wines, fabulous foods, and the sights and aroma that would make any fan of great Italian cuisine smile and say delizioso (delicious in Italian). Even while writing this I am tempted to speak with my sad version of an Italian accent and gesture with my hands and fingers as I speak - when in Rome do as the Romans do.

If you love food and want to learn how to cook while you vacation in Italy, you'll want to consider these cooking classes, tours, or a cooking school. Many are taught by a local chef or visiting chefs from around the country.

The Italian Cookery Course

This course has two courses for traditional Tuscan cuisine and one course for Italian Mediterranean, which includes Italian, French, Spanish, and Moroccan cuisine. This vacation cooking school has been teaching cooking classes for over ten years and all of the classes are taught in English.

The Casa Ombuto and Torre del Tartufo are large villas located on estates in Tuscany, equipped with professional size kitchens. Students will learn how to make dishes in 3-day or one week classes. They also take students on full day trips to gather the ingredients for their dishes. Chefs will CNN's online site has rated this as "Perfect Present for cooks." The Observer Newspaper elected them as one of the top 10 cookery schools in Europe.